When backpackers grow up or get rich

By Amanda Kendle

5 In my twenties I was a true-blue budget backpacker. I planned every detail months ahead and carried everything I needed in one pack on my back. I tied my hair together carelessly each day and didn't bother too much if my clothes got dirty. Getting a cheap stay was important, buying a handbag was not. Now that I've hit my thirties, habits have changed a bit. These days I pay a bit more for a private bathroom, but I don't mind if this bathroom is in a hostel rather than in a hotel. [...]
